Tips to Protect Your Investment During a Major Crisis

By Melissa Smith, ACS Financial Readiness Program Manager

If you are an investor, then you should be familiar with the term 'ebb and flow'. Markets often tend to be more volatile during a crisis, and it can be tough for individuals who are close to retirement. However, for those years away from retirement, time is on your side. The stock market tends to correct itself over time. It could even be a good time to invest because stock prices are usually low. Most people could see a significant gain over time by investing now. Remember, when the market is volatile, you are likely to be buying more shares.

But what if you are close to retirement and your investments have taken a nosedive? Do not panic. Stay the course – depending on where you are in your retirement goals. Sometimes the best thing to do is nothing. Keep in mind that investing for retirement is long-term. Do not let short-term market fluctuations change your goal.

Meet with your broker or financial advisor for expert advice. They are there to assist and guide you in both volatile and non-volatile times by defining goals, objectives, and identifying your timelines which will help to limit risks. Review your portfolio for diversification, especially if you are in a five-year retirement window.

You may have to adjust your retirement age if necessary. If your savings are not where you want them to be, you may have to plan to work a little longer. Reevaluate your savings goal and calculate how long it will take you to reach that goal. It may only be a matter of a few additional years.

Don't sell stocks or cash out your retirement fund. Remember, if you withdraw money before you are 59½, you will pay income tax and, in some cases, even penalties.

How is your money allocated? You may want to redistribute your wealth so that it is being invested more conservatively. For example, bonds (the G and F funds in TSP) with less money can move to riskier investments such as stocks, (the C, S and I funds in TSP). Before you invest new money, think about your tolerance and risk levels. Always contact a financial advisor to get personalized advice about your unique situation.

Another factor to consider is emergency savings or liquid cash. Financial advisors will typically encourage setting aside a small portion of your income for future money (401K, Roth, IRA's, TSP), however if you do not have enough cash to fall back on, you may want to temporarily stop contribution to retirement accounts until you have accumulated at least three to six months of living expenses. Savings or cash liquidity is crucial in times of a crisis or pandemic.

Taking money from a retirement account should be weighed and considered very carefully. For some, it may be the only option. The Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act provides an added level of protection for those eligible individuals impacted by COVID-19. Individuals who meet eligibility requirements for the Retired Minimum Distribution (RDM), hardship withdrawals, and loan borrowing will have penalties waived. Individuals will still have to pay the taxes. For more information, contact the Army Community Service Financial Readiness Office at 706-791-3579.
